Evan-Moor Educational Publishers Announces a Partnership with Educents

Well-known educational publisher and new online educational marketplace work together to bring affordable, quality resources to teachers and parents

Monterey, CA (December 2, 2015)—Evan-Moor Educational Publishers is pleased to announce a partnership with Educents, an online educational marketplace for teachers, homeschoolers, and parents.

“Educents and Evan-Moor share a similar passion for education and helping children learn,” said Trisha Thomas, Chief Marketing Officer at Evan-Moor Educational Publishers. “We are excited to partner with Educents to reach an entirely new audience of teachers, homeschoolers, and parents with our quality educational resources.”

Educents will showcase more than 20 of Evan-Moor’s top-selling resources on its site, including popular daily practice series such as Daily Language Review and Daily Math Practice, Common Core reading and writing resources, and at-home enrichment titles such as the Skill Sharpeners series. In turn, Educents offers educators and parents accessible and affordable educational materials, all in one place.

“Educents strives to present our customers with innovative products that will get kids excited about learning,” said Kate Whiting, CEO and co-founder of Educents. “Evan-Moor has a long tradition of inspiring children to learn and fits our goal of providing teachers and parents with affordable and innovative educational products.”

About Educents
Since the launch of Educents in April 2013, the company has saved educators over $20 million and has helped more than 350,000 teachers, homeschoolers, and parents gain access to educational materials all in one place. Whether it’s full curriculum or a supplemental educational product, book, or science kit, you’ll find it on Educents. Learn more about Educents at www.educents.com.
